GEORGE WASHINGTON VARNER

Disappearance of George Washington Varner during the Civil War.

George W. Varner was the second oldest known son of George Varner of Missouri. According to census records George W. Varner was born in 1838. By the age of 25, he was listed as a Union deserter and not known to have been heard from, by anyone again.

George W. Varner appears to be first recorded in the records on the Federal Census of 1840. George Varner of Missouri as head of household in Pettis County, MO., is listed as having three male children. One between 5 & 10 years and two under 5 years. It is assumed the older child is Thomas J. and the two youngest are George W. and Edward D.

In the 1850 Federal Census George W. is again with the family in Pettis County, MO. and listed by name Geo. W., 12 years of age, male, born in Missouri.
By the 1860 Federal Census George W. is still with the family, but in Miller County, MO. Listed as George W., 23 years of age, male, born in Missouri.

We know that the parents of George W., George Varner of Missouri and wife Harriet disappear from records after this 1860 census. Neither can be found to have ever owned land in Miller County. Unsubstantiated family lore says that both parents were killed in Miller County by bushwhackers around the start of the Civil War. Could this be the reason that George W. and later Edward D. both joined the Union army?

Military records from the National Archives show that George W. Varner enlisted in the Union Cavalry in Jefferson City, MO. On August 4th 1862. Military records also show him as 5’9” tall, light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, single, a teamster, native of Pettis Co. Missouri, father born in Georgia.¹

The Regimental History for the 10th Missouri Cavalry shows deployment as follows: Moved to Memphis, Tenn., December 1862. Duty in the District of Memphis, Tenn. Until February 1863. Regiment went on to participate in many actions through the remainder of the war after George W. is reported a deserter.²

Muster Roles for September and December 1862 show George W. at Jefferson Barrack.

On January 27, 1863 George W. is reported as a deserter from the unit located at Columbus, KY. I have not located any action reports for the unit at this time period to determine if the 10th Cavalry had been engaged in any activity that could have resulted in George W. being killed but his body never recovered. I understand that this area is swampy and that soldiers were lost and died under similar conditions.

George W. is not known to have surfaced again. So, we do not know if George W. was killed in battle, died and body not recovered, or in fact deserted and lived out his life under an assumed name or in another part of the country?

I have done some initial, high level searching in other locations around the county for George W. after the Civil War without success. It would however be interesting to find out that George W. survived the war and has descendants.

I have placed a copy of George Washington Varner’s service record on the web site for others interested in this particular missing link.

NEWS

Varner /Riggs Connection Update

We have a new member to the group. Our first Riggs has joined and is receiving the newsletter. Frederick L. Riggs was born in 1937 and lives in Cincinnati, OH. Fred is a one-step DNA deviation from Warren Ray Varner and I.

Fred’s father was Wynford M. Riggs (1905-1988) whose family was from Keokuk, IA.

Fred is fascinated by the Riggs/Varner revelations and interested in pursuing the connections. Fred forwarded me a copy of his direct family genealogy for those interested. It can also be found in Alvy Ray Smith’s eBook referenced on the Varner Family Genealogy web site.

Happy to have you Fred!
